Keystone Company Sells Lumber, Complete, for Five Room Bungalow at $1,741

No Need for Waiting Longer for Building Materials to Drop in Price.

LARGEST STOCK ON HAND

The Keystone Lumber Company now has the largest stock of lumber and building materials it has had in its history. Cars of the finest materials are being unloaded almost daily. The most recent arrival was a car of fir lumber suitable for siding, flooring, ceilings or partitioning, and there are not a half a dozen knots in the entire car load. In the display advertisement in The Courier today, the company is showing a five-room bungalow, including the floor plan, and is offering to sell all the lumber and millwork, which includes the lumber from this car, for the small sum of $1,741.00. It has often been said that "I am going to wait until lumber comes down before I build my house." Why wait when you can buy your lumber for so little a bungalow at such a low price? Look for the display ad, on another page. For those who are going to build additions or make other repairs, you can save money by buying windows and doors from us. We have just unloaded a car of sashes and are looking for a car of doors any day. We have the largest stock of floor and window frames in town for either frame or brick veneer houses. A large stock of all kind of materials is on hand and there is no time like the present to build. Build your Own Home!

Decked Out in Babylonian Splendor New York Gives Welcome to Democrats

ward, C. H. Pforsheimer and others equally well known.

Each man has volunteered to pay the entertainment costs of the delegation awarded him. The list is absolutely non-partisan and includes the city's most prominent Republicans, as well as Democrats.

A sample of fun in store is the entertainment schedule laid out for the Alabama delegation by Eugene F. Moran, its sponsor. It includes a trip around New York harbor, inspection of transatlantic ships in port, buffet luncheon aboard the Majestic or Berengaria, and a theatre party at the guests of Mary Kirkpatrick, the playwright.

Besides the delegation entertaining of course, there is to be general city-wide entertainment, starting today with a garden party to committee-women, given by Miss Elizabeth Marbury, prominent Democratic worker.

Every arrangement for putting the city in a new holiday suit of clothes has been completed—and what a "suit" it is!

Every building is ablaze with the splendor of flags, every up-town store window is filled with fine silks and the glitter of bright and precious things. Even the work-a-day downtown world is clean—or at least as clean as is possible in a valley of lowering buildings and 10,000 smoke stacks.

The Light Scheme.

When the lights go up tonight, visitors will see a transformed Fifth Avenue—the arboreal of streets. The decorations called their product New York's "Golden Way."

From Washington Arch to 60th Street, the Avenue will blaze with orange colored lamps. Then there will be blue lamps and frosty white lamps for two and a half miles—the longest stretch of decorative lighting ever attempted. More than 25,000 globes will be used.

Each block of Fifth Avenue will represent some state or territory. Every lamp post already is decorated with four flags, two American flags, the flag of New York City, and the flag of the state.

Meantime the "business men" who expect to get something more than pocket money from the sale of eatables, drinkables and souvenirs are on hand in force.

Vendors line the streets and the bootleggers, as the report goes, may be found other places.

For, although R. Q. Merrick, in charge of federal prohibition enforcement has announced the city will be very, very dry during the convention, those on the "inside" predict there will be plenty of fire-water secretly on tap.

In Madison Square Garden.

Madison Square Garden, site of the convention proper has been ready for several days to receive the delegates following an extensive remodeling.

Delegates will be seated in the center of the big building. Alternates will be at one side of them. Members of the New York National Convention Committee and guests who obtain seats through the Democratic National Committee also will be seated on the main floor. The rest of the crowd must use the balconies.

For each $100 subscription by New Yorkers for convention entertainment, one seat is given. Allotment of them, however, will not take place until tomorrow.

Hanging from beneath the balconies will be little platforms from which the photographers and moving picture men do their work.

In the basement will be telegraph instruments, telephones and all the conveniences of their own "city room" for newspapermen.

The radio is to be extensively used at this convention. Two companies will do all the broadcasting—the American Telegraph and Telephone Company and the New York Telephone Company, the latter a subsidiary of the former. They will send the program to 12 stations scattered about the country. They are: WEAF and WJZ, New York; WCAP and WRC, Washington; WGY, Schenectady; WOR, Buffalo; KDKA, Pittsburgh; WGN, WMAQ and WLS, Chicago; KSD, St. Louis; and WDAF, Kansas City.

The Associated Association Committee today announced that there still are rooms available at prices varying from $2 to $8. New York hotel men say they won't profit.

The program of the convention, unless changed by unexpected developments, is as follows:

TUESDAY: Keynote speech by Senator Harrison of Mississippi, and appointment of committees on organization and credentials.

WEDNESDAY: Report of organization committee and election and installation of permanent chairman and permanent organization. Appointment of committees on platform, order of business, and rules. Speech of the permanent chairman, who sounds second keynote for the coming campaign. Report on credentials committee, if any seats are contested.

THURSDAY: Report of platform committee (unless committee on rules changes customary procedure), discussion and adoption. Nominations begin with roll call of states in alphabetical order. Seconding speeches. Limited in time.

FRIDAY: Continuance of nominations and possible beginning of balloting. Discussion over platform and desire of delegates for week-end pleasure may delay first ballot until Monday.

Hutchinson, Hilder alleged, took too much of the road and crashed into him, injuring him and smashing the front part of his car. Hutchinson escaped uninjured, while his car was slightly damaged.

For years the Peerless has been recognized as one of the best. The New PEERLESS, however, is a wonderful improvement over the old models. We do not believe there is another car, selling for the same price, which can compare with the performance of the New Peerless, whether it be a Six or an Eight.

Where can you find a car with an engine that can equal the sturdy one used in the Peerless? Where can you find a car with such luxurious upholstery as the Peerless affords? Where can you find a car that boasts of such beautiful lines as those of the Peerless? It's impossible! And we're selling the Peerless because we know it is best. Let us demonstrate.

Don't Buy a "Pig in a Poke"

When you buy your car you buy one that is well known in your locality because you want to know what you are getting.

Naturally you want it to make a good appearance so you keep it washed and perhaps Simonized. But who does your work? Is it a man who makes that sort of thing his business or is it someone who does it now and then to make a few dollars?

Don't buy a pig in a poke! We can't tell you anything about your own business—if you are on the job; neither can you tell us anything about ours because we know it from A to Z. We have been in it for years past and expect to be in it for years to come. All cars we wash are rubbed dry with a chamolite the correct way. Power Brakes Likely to Be Feature of 1926 Car Season — Combination of Air and Hydraulic Brakes Viewed as Probable Development in Near Future—Automatic Gear Shifts Point Way to Elimination of Manual Effort in Driving of Cars.

By William Ullman

While motorists ponder over what type of brake to specify when purchasing new cars, and while manufacturers debate the advantages of various types prior to the announcement of their 1926 models, automobile engineers are at work upon an idea that may revolutionize the whole subject of deceleration.

After all these years the thought is gaining headway that the power to stop an automobile should be mechanical just as is the power to start it.

Not only that but it is generally agreed in some circles that the power to shift gears should also be mechanical, thus preserving manual operation for the work of steering and pushing out the clutch.

Power brakes were thought of a long time ago in connection with steam trains and street cars, but some how or other the world seemed to think that it was quite all right for a man to rely upon his own strength to stop a three thousand pound vehicle hundreds of times daily.

Power brakes were frequently suggested as possibilities for the automobile, but never as necessities.

The situation is said to be changing so rapidly that air brakes will be seen on some passenger cars before very long, which—in the mad pace of automobilism—means before the next automobile show comes to town. Air brakes are already used on motor buses that are running on regular schedules over many highways.

Why should a driver be obliged to use his own strength to stop his car when there is such an abundance of mechanical power beneath the hood? Many are asking this question, and according to reports many are ready with the answer.

Anyone who knows the theory of leverage must appreciate the fact that every time he applies the brakes on his car he does as much work as is required in killing the car's momentum. This work is "gained" down by a system of levers to such an extent that applying the brakes seems to be a very simple matter, yet all the while the driver is expending an enormous amount of energy. It's one of the things that helps put him to sleep at night.

No automobile with manually operated brakes will come to a stop downhill without extracting a lot of energy from its driver.

Efficient design may lead the driver to believe that he is "hardly pressing" on the brake pedal but old Archimedes who discovered the principle of the lever says that it is a delusion somewhat on the order of the installment plan.

You are able to do a lot by doing it in gentle doses, but you do the same amount of work as though you were to get out and hold the car back.

IT IS EASY TO PAY FOR A

Everybody wants an automobile. Everybody can pay for a Chevrolet. Everybody can afford to own a Chevrolet.

You can buy a Chevrolet just as you buy any other important necessity. Not one family in a thousand pays cash in full for a home. They make a substantial down payment, then pay off the mortgage with what they used to pay for rent, plus other savings, and in a few years obtain title to a home of their own.

This most popular and most economical family car is just another home—but on wheels. It takes the whole family evenings and holidays to where they are eager to go, and daily transports one or more of the family's workers to and from their business, therefore, all the family gladly helps to pay for it.

It can be bought just as you buy a stationary home. It earns its own way and you ride while you pay.

It is the best paying investment any family can make because it provides transportation, saves time, and makes all outdoors your playground, bringing health and happiness to the whole family.

Let us show you the different models and explain how easy it is for you to get, use and pay for—

by standing in its way.

Engineers now contend that such a crude way of stopping an automobile is no longer necessary. People used to get hold of the end of a lever and crank over an engine that they couldn't begin to turn without the aid of the crank, but that day passed when the electric self-starter became available. On this theory many believe that the manually-stopped car must also vanish.

This belief is strengthened greatly by the growing popularity of the power-operated gear shift. Not only is this seen on cars already in service but is announced for some 1925 models. If it has become necessary to cease drawing upon the driver's strength to shift gears it is a foregone conclusion that the operation of the brakes should no longer be left to the driver's physical ability.

Power operation of the brakes will have nothing to do with the number of brakes or their location, since the idea is equally applicable to four or two-wheel brake layouts. It does not even concern the matter of the operation of the brake shoes. The power can be applied directly to the brake shoes, or it can be relayed to the shoes through cables, rods or hydraulic tubes. All that the power brake is going to do is to do away with the driver's brake pedal, so that he can keep his right foot on or near the accelerator.

The power for the brakes will take the place of the driver's foot and the strength behind it. In a type of brake already used in Europe the car is stopped by its own momentum, the brake operating mechanism being into play a clutching device that couples the speed of the propeller shaft with the brakes. This is operated by the conventional brake pedal, but movement of such pedal is no more laborious than pressing on the accelerator. It can be operated just as well with a hand lever.

This, however, does not represent the type of power brake likely to be popular in America because it does not represent the possible limit to freedom from effort in starting the brake mechanism going.

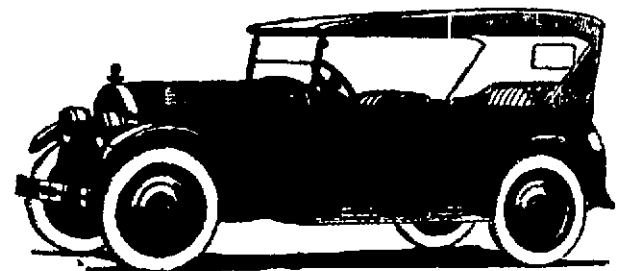

Compressed air seems to be the most convenient form of braking force since it lends itself to a wide variety of applications. It can be generated by a pump geared to the engine as an accessory, or it can be generated by a pump attached to the propeller shaft, thus utilizing the car's momentum for the supply of compressed air. It can also be generated by electric power, and while this would make use of the electric current that is now wasted on the automobile it necessitates considerable changes in the electrical system and makes for complications.

Suffice it to say, however, that there are as many ways of creating a supply of compressed air as there are of using it.

One of the most interesting schemes in this connection is the proposal for a combination of air power with hydraulic brakes. Hydraulic brakes, whether for two or four brake operation, have demonstrated their advantage over other types in their equalization of brake shoe operating force. They eliminate the necessity of adjustment and they give a step-up in power sufficient to render a slight pressure on the operating plunger very effective. The newest idea is to operate the master plunger of the hydraulic system by means of liberating compressed air rather than by pressure of a pedal.

With the self-starter every driver will have less to do in operating the car and more opportunity to do the few remaining acts more skillfully. It should be a great aid to safety, and a convenience to the tired business man or woman who looks to the open road for recreation.

"Quite Good Enough"

Any car that can take ten people over the Summit in high gear must have something more than a good salesman. It has to have a powerful engine for the Summit is one of the hardest pulls in the country. We don't know how many cars are equal to the test, but, we know that the FLINT can do it.

Last Thursday, June 5th, Mr. W. A. White of the United Motor Company took his demonstrator which has been driven 20,000 miles, to Uniontown and went over the Summit with ten people in the car, weighing 1,576 pounds. When they reached the top they were making twenty-five miles an hour in high gear. Then they went up with two passengers and the driver and hit the top at forty-five miles per hour. The car that can equal this performance must have a real motor. The first FLINT that was made was tried out by W. C. Durant. After his ride he gave the car its slogan "Quite Good Enough." Today, thousands of FLINT owners are agreeing that it is no exaggeration.

"The Meter Way Is the Better Way"

Not so many years ago the tanks on automobiles were filled from buckets and cans. Then came the gasoline pumps which were a decided improvement.

However the demand for a more rapid and accurate means of transferring gasoline from the storage tank to the tank of your car, caused the meter system to be developed.

Just as progress eliminated the old time pump, gasoline pumps are being replaced by meters. As the principal of gas meters is similar to the city water system with meters, the improvement over the pump is equal.

To better supply our large and growing list of patrons we have installed two of these meters. They are time savers and you are assured of getting full measure. We'll be glad to explain the way they work to you.

Miss Kennedy is seen in a most trying role, a much-harassed heroine who is continually in peril and even danger of death when she finds herself at the mercy of a band of bootlegging pirates out at sea. Miss Kennedy works hard to please and that she succeeds is attested by the applause that comes when the girl emerges from hair-breadth escapes and finally yields to true love offered by Harrison Ford as the manly young hero.

The story is the joint work of those clever screen and stage writers, John Emerson and Anita Loos, based upon an original theme written for Miss Kennedy by the famous illustrator and magazine cover artist, Neysa McMein.

"I'm not going to be bullied into saying a word. That's the long and short of it," he repeated in disgust. "Let Meyer tell the fellow if he wants to. I'll have nothing to do with it. We're not responsible for what has happened—if anything has."

"Then I'll go and get Mr. Meyer." "Just as you please. I'd see this ruffian at Halifax first, if you ask me." The angry color flushed his face again as he thought of the insult to which he had been subjected.

To Colter Meyer explained her purpose. He nodded agreement without words.

After two or three attempts she got the superintendent on the telephone at the McElle Gibson mine and arranged with him that he was to come to the hotel at once. A few minutes later he drove up in his car.

Meyer put the case to him.

He turned to his employer. "You want me to tell Colter what I know?" "I don't care a turn of my hand whether you tell the fellow or not," drawled Verlander, ignoring the presence of Colter.

The superintendent peered at Meyer in his near-sighted fashion over the glasses on his nose. "Can't see that it matters much, Miss Dwight. I'm not worrying a bit about Jack Kilmeny, but if Colter and you are I'm willing to tell what I know on condition that you keep the facts to yourselves."

"I'll keep quiet if you haven't injured Jack in any way," Colter amended.

"We haven't. He was sound as a new dollar when I left him Tuesday night. Want to hear the particulars?"

"That's what I'm here for," snapped Colter.

Meyer told the whole story so far as he knew it.

CHAPTER XIV

Spirit Rapping

Farguhar and Captain Kilmeny left next day for another short hunting trip. The captain had offered to give it up, but Meyer had urged upon him that it would not be safe to disappoint his companion. He had gone reluctantly, because he saw that his fiancée was worried. His own opinion was that his cousin Jack had disappeared for reasons of his own.

Colter did not relax in his search. But as the days passed hope almost died within him. Jack had plenty of enemies, as an aggressive fighter in a raw country always must have. His friend's fear was that some of them had decoyed Kilmeny to his death. The suspicions of the minor centered upon Peale and Trafyle both because Jack had so recently had trouble with them and because they knew beforehand of his intention to remove the ore. But he could find no evidence upon which to base his feeling, though he and Curly, in company with a deputy sheriff, had put the Cornishmen through a grilling examination.

It had been understood that the young women should take a trip through the Never Quit before they left Goldbank, but for one reason or another this had been postponed until after the captain and Farguhar had started on their final hunting expedition. The second afternoon after their departure was the one decided upon for the little adventure.

Verlander, with the extravagance that went hand in hand with an occasional astonishing parsimony, had ordered oilskin suits and waterproof boots made especially for his guests. A room was reserved for the young ladies at the mine, equipped for this one occasion to serve as a boudoir where they might draw in comfort.

The mine owner's guests dined, with a good deal of hilarious merriment the short skirts, the boots and the rubber helmets. The costumes could not have been called becoming, but they were eminently suited for the wet, damp tunnels of the Never Quit.

After they had entered the cave it was a little terrifying to be shut so rapidly down into the blackness of the mine.

"Don't be afraid. It's quite safe," Meyer told them cheerfully.

At the tenth level the elevator stopped and they emerged into an open space.

"We're going to follow this drift," explained the superintendent.

They searched themselves in ore cars and were wheeled into a cavern lighted at intervals by electric bulbs. Presently the cars slowed down and the occupants descended.

"This way," ordered Meyer.

They followed in single file into a hot, damp tunnel, which dripped moisture in big drops from the roof upon a rough, uneven floor of stone and dirt where pools of water had occasionally gathered. The darkness increased as they moved forward, driven back by the candles of the men for a space further than they could reach with outstretched hands.

Owning a home of your own means freedom and contentment of mind for you. First, you eliminate the everlasting process of flat or house hunting. None of these worries if Your Home Is Your Own.

When you make payments on your own home you have the satisfaction of knowing that this money formerly was paid into the coffers of your landlord.

Many people have the impression that mail-order houses are selling ready built homes at a great saving over the prices of local concerns. This is not the fact. The mail-order houses feature the cost of lumber for a five or six room house, as the case may be. YET, LUMBER IS NOT THE BIGGEST FACTOR! Other people say that they will wait until lumber comes down in price. They are mistaken. The price of lumber is very reasonable.

For example—We have the complete plans and specifications for the house pictured below. We will sell you all the lumber and mill work (doors, windows, etc.), for this house, delivered as needed, not all at one time, for the nominal sum of $1741.49

Or—We will sell you all the necessary materials, lumber, mill work, hardware, cement, gravel, plaster, brick, roofing, etc., for only

$2624.76

Notice the difference in the two prices. When you read the low prices on homes in the ads of mail-order houses you don't take into consideration the fact that they are selling you only the lumber. You will find that a ready built home will cost a great deal more than you thought.

We have plans and specifications for a number of different homes. We'll be glad to show them to you and tell you what they'll cost.

5 ROOMS AND BATH

Dimensions 26x32 Ft.

FIRST FLOOR PLAN

Here is a plan which should appeal to a small family, as it is unusually complete for a small house. A large, cheerful living room connecting to dining room with a cased opening, a well arranged kitchen and two bedrooms and bath connecting to small hall make an ideal layout. A stairway is provided to basement and to second floor where two more rooms may be finished if so desired. A spacious porch is provided across front of living room. The exterior is constructed of wood siding and shingled gables; brick porch piers supporting tapered wood columns, large, overhanging eaves and the attractive roof all add charm to this well designed bungalow.

Of Special Interest to Home Owners

When you have been in business for years and years and still have hundreds of friendly customers you must be delivering the goods. That's the case with us. For nineteen years we have been serving the people of the Coke Region and have always done our best to satisfy them. We feel that our present prosperity is due to this and we are going to continue giving our patrons the best we have.

Fir Lumber

We have just unloaded a car of fine fir lumber. There is hardly a knot in the entire carload. This is the kind of lumber used in the specifications of the five room bungalow which we advertise.

Door and Window Frames

A complete car of door and window frames has just been unloaded. They are made from selected wood and are suitable for either a frame or a brick veneer house.

Barrett Everlastic Roofing

Whether it be an office building or your own home you'll save money by using Barrett's Everlastic roofing. Your choice of red, green and blue black. It may be had in rolls or shingles. Many people, too, are using the shingles for the sides of their homes.

Lehigh Portland Cement

Specify Lehigh Portland Cement when you are building. It is a fine cement and lasts for years. There is none better — and few as good. Try it.

Big Red Fence

This is the kind of a fence you need. Horse high, bull strong and chicken tight. May be had in either three or four foot heights.

Silvertone Stucco

We recommend Silvertone Stucco for any purpose. Can be used successfully on either wood or building blocks. Your choice of smooth or dash finishes.

Possibility of Tennis Tournament Stirs Local Interest in the Sport

Association Members Getting Into Shape for Second Annual Event.

MEETING MONDAY NIGHT

The prospect of a tennis tournament for members of the Connellsville Tennis Association in the near future, has stirred considerable interest in the meeting of the club to be held Monday night in the Unity Fraternity rooms in North Pittsburgh street. At this session the matter will be definitely determined and if such a tournament is to be held a committee will be named to get the machinery in motion. Last year a very successful tournament was staged, although it was slowed up somewhat towards the end by rainy weather. "Ab" Solson won the tournament cup last season. Indications are that rivalry for the honors will be keen, both in singles and doubles. The courts have become popular during the past few weeks and players are quickly rounding into top shape.
